There are two problems which cause great worry to our educationists. the problem of religious and moral instruction in a land of many faiths and the problem arising out of a large variety of languages.

Taking up the education of children, be that they should be trained to love one another to be kind and helpful to all, to be tender to the lower animals and to observe and think right. The task of teaching them how to read and write and to count and calculate is important, but it should not make us lose sight of the right way. For this, it is necessary to call into aid, culture, tradition and religion. but in our country, we have in the same school to look after boys and girls born in different places and belonging to families that live diverse ways of life and follow different forms of worship associated with the different denominations of religion. it will not do to trade the easy part of a wedding the difficulty by attending solely to physical culture and intellectual education. we have to evolve a suitable technique and method for serving the spiritual needs of school children professing different faiths. We should promote an atmosphere of mutual respect a few less understanding and helpful cooperation among the different communities, in our society. Again we must remain one people and have therefore to give basic training in our schools to speak and understanding more than one language and to appreciate and respect the different religions prevailing in India. It is not right for us in India to be dissuaded from this consideration by the edge to overtaking the young mind. That is necessary must be done. And it is not in fact too great a burden.
